Class History

1932—the year that African miners found a 726-karat diamond, Roosevelt was elected president for the first time, and four of this year's graduating class entered Moses Brown. In 1945 Bill Dunbar, Bill Lindblad, Jack Merchant, and Wilson Utter ended careers in Moses Brown which began on that distant day in '32 when first they gazed on Miss Woodbury's kindly face. Johnny Pitts was also a member of that group, but his yearning for learning led him to skip a grade and graduate in 1944.

Here in the pre-primary, as Miss Woodbury patiently explained the mysteries of block-piling and picture-(?)-drawing, the foundation was laid for our future education. Here also we made acquaintance with the drama, Jack Merchant being an unwilling Goldilocks in that super-colossal production, "The Three (3) Bears." The next fall in the honored position of first-graders we moved upstairs, where we met Sears Ingraham. Under the wise guidance of Miss Eastman we learned the rudiments of the three R's, as well as a smattering of Mother Nature's secrets, while our dramatic offering of that year was the culinary fantasy "The Gingerbread Man." In the second primary Dave Jencks and Red Lownes joined our group in time to learn from Miss Crawford such complicated mathematical problems as "one times one is one." Miss Buffum came to instruct us in the use of crayon and brush, while Madame Warge added to our feeling of importance by introducing us to French, alternately threatening to spank us on our "little behinds" and claiming proudly that we were the best class she'd ever had. (Oh, Madame, I bet you say that to all the boys!)

Miss Wilson guided our class, which now included Nate Fales, through the third primary, introducing us to Bozo, the Woodchuck, manual training, and the art of weaving. The class had a big laugh one day during a penmanship lesson when Jay Skinner signed his name as "Jay Skinmanship." That year was notable also because we had real afternoon classes for the first time. Much to our disgust we had to sew our own costumes for our assembly, in which Willie Utter played the part of "The Little Rabbit Who Wanted Red Wings."

Bursting with pride, we entered the First Intermediate, where Miss Pixley ("Pixilated" we called her) read us the ever-suitable "Dorna." For the first time our history was marred by sabotage when Sears Ingraham set fire to the shavings from the pencil sharpener with his burning-glass. Since travel broadens the mind, we traveled over to the Second Intermediate room in the main building to drop a close decision in a hard-fought spelling bee, and Bill Dunbar had the class out to his grandfather's plant, where we were properly awed by the noisy machinery. For our assembly that year our travel-broadened minds, years ahead of their time, conceived a pageant on the brotherhood of nations.

The rest of our stay in the Lower School was spent in the main building. During those last three years our group gained such notables as "Pewee" Gifford and "Skyscraper" Kimball, as well as Fred Brunswick, Earl Farrell, and Wendell Phillips. In the Third and Fourth Intermediates we were introduced to tackle football, losing our only out-of-school game. For the greater honor and prestige of the school we also lost a hotly-contested baseball game in the spring. About this time Mr. Howe began casting covetous eyes on Harvey Thayer, who broke a couple of Father and Son Day track records.

In the Second Intermediate, under the watchful eye of Miss Chappell, we became a class of cartographers, making several large and colorful pictorial wall maps. We wrote our own script for our assembly of that year, which was an extravaganza based on a radio program depicting the opening of the Mt. Whitney-Death Valley Highway.

In the Third Intermediate, after the initial confusion caused by two eye-filling teachers named Miss Evins and Miss Evans, we settled down to a fairly normal year. The ancient history that Mr. Brigham tried so hard to pound into our heads influenced us to perform on the stage a play entitled "The First Marathon," in which future cross-country star Dave Jencks unsymbolically was not Pheidippides. The climax of our work that year was the writing of our autobiographies, of which we were unjustly proud.

At long last the object of all our toil was reached when we entered the Fourth Intermediate, where we were soon living in constant fear of Mr. Allen's "tables-tests." Feeling the superiority that comes with advanced years, we yawned when Mr. Brigham tried to teach us American history, sighed when Miss Evins entered the room for our English class, looked bored when Mr. Hoyt came in with his geography book, and did as little work as possible in preparation for our biweekly French lessons under Madame Warge. Extracurricular activities assumed a new importance for us when, for four bits, we were allowed to join the Bicycle Club. After the initiation on "Leaping Lena" and the other oddities collected by "Pop" Allen for the purpose, we spent many happy hours pedaling from point to point of interest around Rhode Island. A highlight of the year was the Boston trip, when we stretched our sea legs on "Old Ironsides," climbed pantingly to the top of the Bunker Hill monument, and were properly impressed by the shrivelled mummies in the Peabody Museum. At the end of the year we were honored by a visit from Mr. Thomas, who told us something of what was in store for us when we entered the Upper School. So it was with a feeling of sadness that we bid adieu to our honored position of top men in the Lower School to become the insignificant and undignified "gentlemen" on Jit's left.

FIRST FORM

Contrary to the usual feeling about returning to school, most of us as the summer wore on almost anticipated that fated day when the Upper School would reopen and we would be accepted into the clandestine folds of its activities. However, we never imagined the intricacies which this involved until that first morning when we entered school again and met that austere dignitary in the soft tweed suits whom we had heard so much about—later known to us as "Jit."

Study Hall, which previously had been known to us only as the room in which every one sang in bass voices at 8:30, seemed to be the intersection of a busy city; and amid such a scramble of exciting events, reacquaintances, assignments, teachers, and bells, we were completely lost. But after the first day had passed, we gradually settled into the routine and became used to being considered as inconsequentials and small fry by the rest of the school.

I think that it was under the able tutelage of "Blackie" Markarian, our Latin teacher, that the boys of '45 (they hoped) learned that all was not a bed of roses. If I remember correctly, at least half of the class flunked the course for the first two terms, and it is doubtful what the final outcome might have been—had not Cupid's Arrow claimed our teacher. From then on, he was more lenient (for I'm sure we did no more work).

In one respect we were lucky. That was in not having heard the supercilious legends of "Wild Bill" Paxton's reign of terror in the English department. So graphic were some of these that I am sure many of us would have called it quits rather than try to pass his course. But as it turned out, he wasn't "half-bad," and I'm sure we achieved a strong foundation in grammar.

We were introduced into the complexities of general science by Mr. Kerr, while

Mr. Morton, realizing the folly of trying to teach us math, concentrated on telling us about the "Ponzi" scheme.

The class of '45 first showed its prowess on the "friendly fields of strife" when its Bumblebee team was trounced by the Fourth Intermediate. That spring we had a considerably better baseball team.

The main excitement of the winter occurred when a "select" group of individuals from our class tossed Sears Ingraham into the swimming pool, fully clothed. There was a great commotion over this crime, and the whole class had a meeting with Mr. Thomas. We were duly impressed with the seriousness of our deed.

As spring slowly erased the bleak look of the school campus, we came to consider ourselves full fledged "Upper School" boys. We swaggered with the best of them, attending varsity games, which we planned to take over in a couple of years, with the proper school spirit. When the end of May arrived, most of us even went to view the Lower School field day with a half-amused, half-bored and entirely superior air.

When, at last, Commencement arrived and we saw the class of '41 solemnly shake hands with Mr. Thomas and "Jit," I'm afraid that we acted slightly over-boisterous, but we all really looked forward to that summer and even to the next year.

SECOND FORM

"Old-timers" is the word that best suited us, we thought, when we returned to face the problems of the Second Form in 1941. Scornfully we looked down upon the group of former Lower School bosses, who seemed to be a bit bewildered at the sight of so many upper-classmen. Although we were seated far enough back to get almost out of the category of "small-fry," we were still referred to by our headmaster as "young-hopefuls." On the faculty bench in front of us we were fascinated by the arrival of a new face with a most beautiful mustache; we were told that the man's name was "Oyster" or something like that. Also the science department was filled out by two new teachers—Mr. Pedrick and Mr. Hutton; and to assist Mr. Herman in explaining the intricacies of X and Y, Mr. Reese wielded the chalk. In our class there were thirteen new "young-hopefuls," including: Manager Barber, "Mat-man" Cook, "Lord" Horrell, Rus Knibb, "Pole-vault" Sleicher," "Al" Nazareth and several others, who for one reason or another didn't survive the four years to seniorship. About October, when the uneasiness of unfamiliarity had worn off, the class elections were held. Rus Douglas grabbed off the presidency, with Nate Fales assisting. Bill Miller took on the writing job, and Eddy Lownes handled what folding money he could muster.

In the sports program Coach Eyster discovered many Second Formers coming out to support Easton, Bowersock, and Joslin (our stars from the third form) on the Middler gridiron, and the swimming team was aided by the daring young diver, Paul Cook.

Christmas vacation and a fine performance by the players of the Proscenium Club rolled around; and before we knew it, we were slicking ourselves up to glide (?) across Alumni Hall to the sweet tones of Ed Drew's Orchestra at our Lower Form tea dance.

There were also several other incidents which helped to break up the monotony of that long winter grind. Dr. "Mike" Dorizas, whose interesting talks and imaginative yarns have come to the school for many years, showed us some good news reels and added many bits of information. Although we were still wee, and our wings weren't very strong, yet we did manage to catch hold of "Mike's" fascinating accent. Also we were pepped up by our hero Fred Brunswick, who kept dreaming that he was a Marine on Wake Island. He finally had to stop eating those pickles before going to bed.

Before long we were suffering with very serious cases of spring fever, aided by the balmy breezes which drifted in among the pennies whining around Study Hall! After a delightful Father and Son day, at which time we refreshed our not yet faded memories of Lower School competition (I am also told that there was some undercover betting on the races), we endured those long-dreaded final exams somehow. Then still gazing up with awe at those dignified seniors, we took part in our second graduation, and then went on to freedom for another summer.

THIRD FORM

The Third Form year opened with a bang when the appointed day in September rolled around. The Sophomores upstairs were guided into the new school year under the watchful eyes of Mr. Kite and Mr. Huganir. The corridor proved to have plenty of vim and vigor, with "Chubby" Swindells and "El" Roberts bunking together up at one end, Jerry Swartz and Bob Mathieu holding rooms in the middle section, and Eddy Jarret and Sted Naden inhabiting quarters at the other end. We soon got settled down to a steady diet of plenty of fun and, shall we suggest, "work," and all of us soon became acquainted with the queer ways (so we thought) of our different masters.

Mr. Paxton kept us stepping, high, wide, and fancy in English; Mr. Cate and Mr. E ms, a new addition to the faculty, held down those hopefuls in the modern language field. Mr. Waughtel, who soon became "Coach" to the new fellows, was on the job, still trying to grind some Latin into us. Mr. Hutton was there teaching us the ways of the amoeba and other little dojiggers connected with Biology. And thus acquainted with our able instructors, we entered among the shadows of the elms eager to catch the pearls of wisdom thrown to us at the rate of one bushel per forty minutes, and we thought of the wealth we would have upon graduating.

The class elections were held, and "Bonny" Barstow Bates was chosen as our president, with Russ Douglas, the hometown boy from Maine, taking over the vice-president's chair. Francis Small was elected secretary, while we placed our piggy bank in charge of Eddy Lownes.

The Third Form was well represented in the fall sports activities. Dave Maier was prominent in J. V. Football, while in the Middlers Sted Naden starred in the backfield and was ably supported by "Cooky," Fales, Swindells and Capt. Lindblad, holding positions on the line. "Petit Beaker" Dave Jencks, who later became plain "Beaker," started his great Cross Country career, along with Russ Knibb, Ed Lownes and Roscoe Phillips, "the Shape."

Before we knew it, the Thanksgiving Turkey had been killed and well digested, and we were anticipating Christmas. The Proscenium Club wound up the old year for us with three plays, which entertained all.

After Christmas we were back again with renewed ambitions. Jencks, Cook, Horrell and T. Gifford represented our class on the wrestling mats during the winter season. They could be seen any afternoon out in the Gym pounding the mat with their fists and with fire shooting from their nostrils. Middlers' Basketball steered its way through a successful season under the leadership of Coach Hutton. Douglas, Small, Brunswick and Beede were out there every afternoon dropping the little old egg through the hair-net.

The Chess Club, as well as the Orchestra and Glee Club, was graced with members from among us, and we all know the swell job that they did entertaining themselves as well as the rest of the school.

As the leaves began to appear and spring activities commenced, we kissed Old Man Winter goodbye and looked ahead to summer vacation. Captain Bob Mathieu led the Middlers' Baseball to a successful finish, as did our Sophomore contributors on the track and tennis squads.

As June came nearer and those masterful

Seniors, who inhabited the upper ranks of the school, began to get packed, we undid our belts a notch and found ourselves about ready to take over the positions of Juniors. "Hot stuff!" we thought as we left the Shadows of the Elms for another summer.

FOURTH FORM

Refreshed by a summer's vacation, we returned to take up once more our Battle with the Books. We greeted the new members of our class—namely, Bob Briggs, Pete Cady, Finger, "Baby-face" Hart, "Big Bill" Houston, "Muscles" Miller, Rudy Rudicil, Reeves, and Toby Stapleton.

When sports began, Capt. Dave Jencks went out and started knocking down the cross-country records. Wendell Phillips, El Roberts, Russ Knibb, Fred Brunswick, Sted Naden, and Jack Merchant graced the ranks, and Willie Utter was manager. In football, Miller, Houston, Stapleton, and Briggs strengthened a Varsity team that sustained only one defeat, by Governor Dummer, while Kimball helped out as Assistant Manager. Mr. Raines built a strong Jayvee team around Rudicil, Weeks, Lindblad, Maier, Paul Cook, Farrell, Finger, and Fales. After the football season was over and while the Varsity recuperated, the rest of us played tag football until Thanksgiving vacation.

Under the energetic leadership of Mr. Mitchell, a band was formed, with Tommy Gifford at the drums, Don Swindells and Nate Fales as saxophonists, Bart Bates at the clarinet, and Sted Naden at the trumpet. A large Glee Club was also formed. The tea dance and Proscenium Club's three Christmas plays ushered in the well-earned vacation.

When winter sports got under way, Jencks, Cook, Miller, Farrell, and Toby Stapleton helped the wrestling team through a successful season of five wins and two defeats. Miller took a runner-up spot in the 165-lb. class at the State Meet, while the team took Third Place. Bob Briggs, Dunbar, Merchant, Beede, and Swindells filled out a swimming team that was better than its record showed. In track we had a high representation. Jarret, Fales, Knibb, Naden, Roberts, Brunswick, Barber, and Bob Sleicher, who was elected captain after the mid-year graduation, aided the team to a successful season, which culminated with the capture of Second Place at the M.I.T. Championship Meet.

We also had the distinction of being the first Junior class to attend a Senior Prom. That prom, by the way, was the first to be held in February. The Time test came along again, enabling Finger and Lindblad to show what they knew. Davis Jencks demonstrated the strength of his cast-iron stomach by swallowing a goldfish whole. Thus started the activities which were to earn him the name "Squid."

The Proscenium Club fairly outdid itself in its spring production, "The Pirates of Penzance." With Mrs. Thomas directing and Lincoln girls taking the female roles, the operetta was a great success. After the spring recess, we were again treated to the delight of listening to Dr. Michael Dorizas. In sports, the baseball team started out with high hopes and a goodly number of Juniors—namely, Lindblad, Swindells, Brown, Fales, Dunbar, Beede, Kimball, Cady, Finger, Mathieu, Watts, Cook, Briggs, Miller, and Weeks. Perhaps it was the over-abundance of Fourth Formers, but whatever the reason, the team was doomed for a poor season. The track team also sported a number of Juniors, including Capt. Sleicher, Jarret, Barber, Knibb, Reeves, Roberts, Naden, Jencks, Brunswick, Merchant, Lownes, and Manager Utter. The tennis team went through a successful season—Captain Bart Bates, Russ Douglas, Sears Ingraham, Johnny Horrell, and Franny Small all contributing to make it a happy season for Mr. Herman.

Father and Son Day was blessed with good weather, and we were all very happy once finals were over and done with. A very enjoyable Senior Prom marked the end of our status as Juniors, and the beginning of the last phase of our prep-school days.

FIFTH FORM

Summer slid by with alarming swiftness, and suddenly we were seniors. It was a little frightening at first, being the big boys, the gentlemen on "his" right, the boys who were supposed to set a good example. About half the class, having attended summer session, had a head start as examples of what seniors should be, although the fact was not always too evident. There were several new faces around school: Bob Crowe, George Henderson, from Upper Darby and the Philippines, Bob Farwell, Art Robertshaw, Gerrit Sanford, and John Townsend; and, from the summer group, Perry Coop, Ames "Bud" Sadler, and "Dapper Dick" Wilson. The new group of masters was comprised of Mr. Covell, Mr. Cressman, and Mr. Griffith.

Over the cross country course, Dave Jencks broke all school and state records in leading a good team to a successful season. The football team won four close games and played two others which they made an effort to forget. The Fourth and Fifth Form tea dance came along as usual in November and produced nothing extraordinary beyond a possible rival for Frank Sinatra. Beede, Dunbar, and Nazareth joined the Navy; and suddenly the fall term was almost over. Bates, Lindblad, Merchant, Reeves, and Utter starred in the Proscenium Club's plays; and we trooped happily off for Christmas Vacation.

The Winter Term had hardly started before we lost half our class at the school's second mid-year graduation. For once, the prom, which was marked by a lot of snow and an exhibition of loving by "Cuddles" Barber, was not held the night before graduation. On the following Friday, February 2, twenty fairly clear-headed boys, including Beede and Dunbar fresh out of boot-camp, received diplomas; prizes were awarded to Johnny Horrell, Howie Kimball, and Eddie Lownes, while Dave Jencks received the Headmaster's Cup. Only twenty-six seniors remained for the second half year, and the winter teams suffered accordingly. The wrestling team had looked ahead and scheduled all of its matches to come before graduation; sparked by Paul Cook and Dave Jencks, the grapplers had a good season. Swimming did not fare quite so well, while track, obviously missing a few graduates, kept a creditable record, except in the Private School Championships.

Academically, we forged bravely through Macbeth with Mr. Paxton, who could always get a job on the stage if he gave up teaching; Reeves wondered why some of his literary efforts were not fit for publication and wished he had gone to Burma after all. Henderson, Ingraham, and Townsend kept the math classes awake; Mr. Cate did his best to pound German and French through a lot of thick skulls; while Mr. Raines, with the help of many returning servicemen, made Room 3 a really enjoyable place to end the school day.

Because of early copy dates, MOSAIC work was rushed practically to a conclusion before vacation; "Mike" Dorizas came and went; and the annual Time Current Affairs Test showed up the ignorance of all but a few guys like Finger and Lindblad. Bates, Lindblad, Merchant, Reeves, and Utter, with a trace of help from some of the lower forms, starred in the spring plays; and we left for ten days of freedom, wondering what had become of the Hampton Quartet.

We returned from vacation somewhat refreshed, only to be greeted by a solid Saturday of college tests on April seventh. Most of us were afflicted with spring fever, and we settled into a rather lazy routine, broken only by baseball games, track meets, Father and Son Day, and finally Commencement. Happy and yet sad, we turned our thoughts away from Moses Brown and looked with curiosity and anticipation to a rather uncertain future.

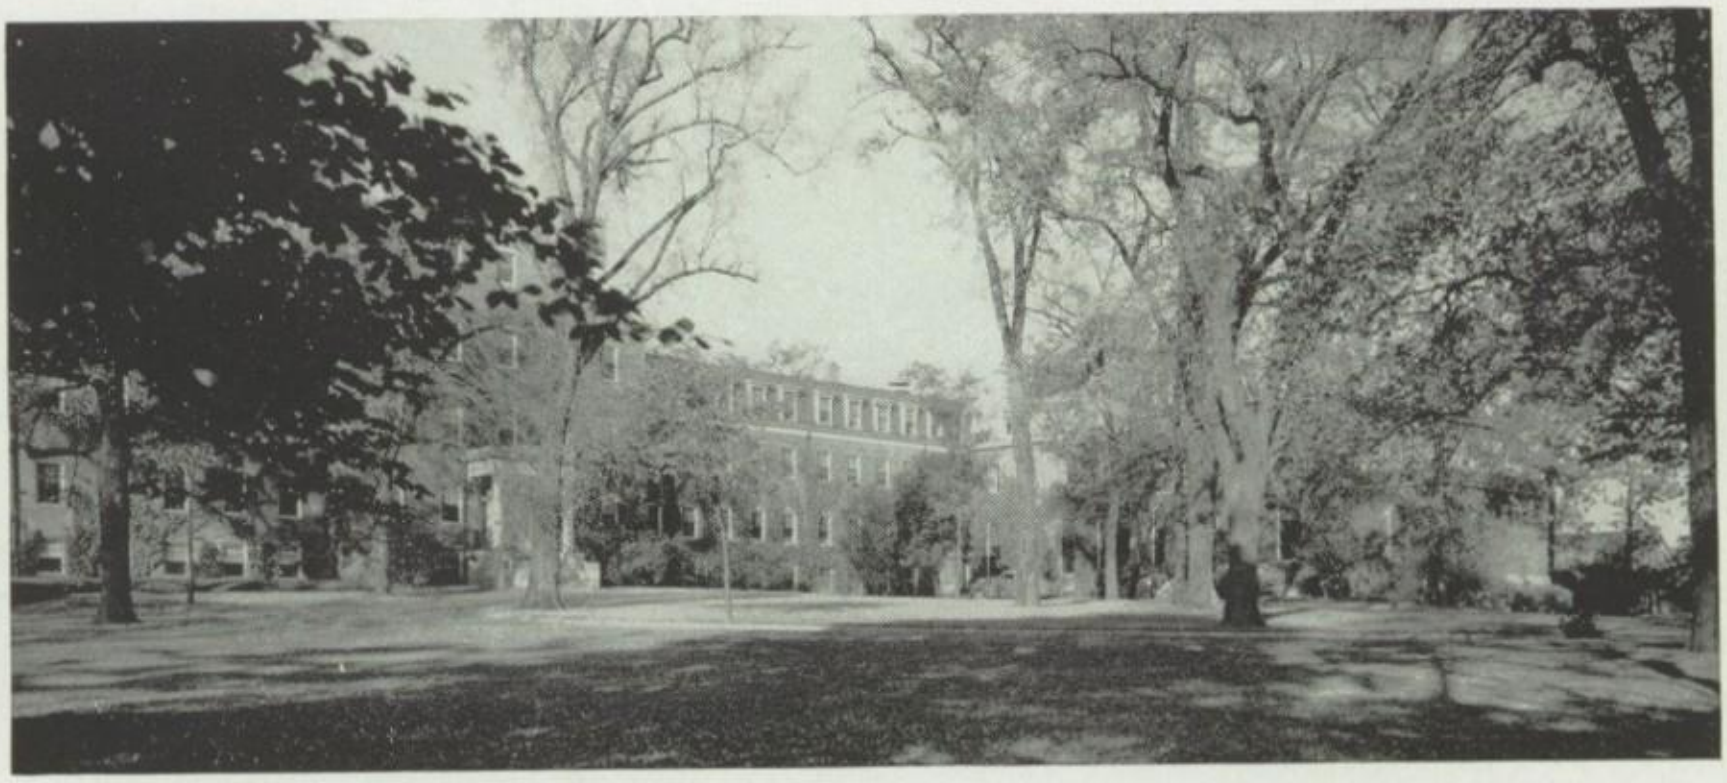
SUMMER

Review: Summer Session



The Summer Session

AFTER a brief but welcome rest we returned to School on the nineteenth of June for the first day of the second summer session. We had hoped for an easy half-day of short classes as a start, but we soon discovered how much we had to do in a limited time; so the first day began with a bang. Included in our group of twenty-one were a few new faces: Dave Dodsworth, Dick Wilson, Perry Coop, and last but not least, Bud Sadler, a splendid specimen from Hopedale, Massachusetts.

Almost all restrictions were lightened, which helped to make the summer much more enjoyable for all. Of course, we, being the second group to attend a summer session, did not get away with quite as much as the fellows in the preceding class, but we made out all right. The old boarders had a good time getting used to the easier life in their department, and Dodsworth caught on quickly. Study periods were quite enjoyable, and there was never too much activity in Study Hall. The youngsters certainly make a big difference; in fact, it seemed very vacant indeed, unless "Crisco" Phillips was working hard on anything in general or Maestro Farrell was trying to compose something new in the front corner. However, there was always something doing in the boys' parlor, where Briggs, Coop, and Jencks always studied history with the help of Mr. Jones and the radio.

Because little was accomplished during the study periods, three or four hours' hard work at night was customary. Mr. Jones' history assignments took a lot of time—when they were done; trig did likewise; and The Old Wives' Tale was a slow process for some, especially those who read it. I guess the tale will never please everyone, but with the help of Mr. Paxton we got through it and then made a stab at Macbeth.

Life in Room Eleven was always exciting. As usual, the Babe took good care of us, but Jencks and Sadler managed to create a few laughs. In fact, as the summer went by, we found a lot of "coke" spread about the room, but Dave and Bud had larger piles than the rest.

We all enjoyed Mr. Jones' classes. They were really something; there was never a dull moment. As usual Mr. Cate had his hands full with German and French classes, plus his daily meeting with Maier, during which the subject was usually Spanish.

Of course Mr. Hutton was busy with Physics. He had his troubles with the last period class, in which it was common for certain individuals to catch up on their lost sleep. Then came the sprint around the gym. I think he was trying to find some likely track prospects.

Mr. Howe and Mr. Henderson were present most of the time. However, "Jit" made his annual trip to the Cape for a well-earned rest, and after a month returned hardly recognizable. Mr. Howe, forgetting track for the summer, attempted to organize a baseball squad, but it ended up with Cook hitting flies to Sadler. It seems that the others necessary to complete the team spent most of each afternoon in the pool trying to keep cool.

As the summer progressed, we became more accustomed to the routine, and I don't think anyone minded the session too much. We did a lot of work, but we had a good time doing it and I'm sure it was time well-spent.

September through December

ON a foggy Wednesday morning, Moses Brown opened its one hundred and twenty-sixth consecutive academic session, greeting with open arms its two hundred and twenty-three High Honor potentialities. For the second time in the history of the School, half the senior class was starting its last half-year. Those boys were busying themselves with enlistment forms and college applications, while the rest of us tried to accustom ourselves to classes and homework (the bane of all students). The sports program began in earnest and helped relieve the strange feeling which always comes at the beginning of a new year. We held class elections in the early part of October.

The light, but capable, varsity football team showed where its heart was, winning all four home games and dropping the last two, which were played away. Co-captains Miller and Houston, Crowe, Swindells, and Tainsh played well during the whole season.

The Middlers' football team, led by Alex Robinson, went through their schedule undefeated, while the Jayvees won an even half of their games. In tennis, Bob Mathieu beat Jack Knowles to win the Senior Singles, while Bobby Knowles took the Junior Singles from Teddy Joslin.

In cross-country, Paul Cook, El Roberts, Pete Cady, John Horrell, and Ab Reeves ably backed up Capt. Davis Jencks, while he blithely continued to knock down the time for the two-and-a-half-mile course, finally stopping with the record of 12:46. Comparing this with the previous record of 13:13 (also set by Jencks last year), one appreciates what an excellent time it is! Dave also set an all-New-England record for the 2.6-mile course at Triggs Memorial Park, running it in the time of 12:39:4.

On November 18, the annual fall tea dance was held in Alumni Hall. The highlight of the affair was a request number by Moses Brown's outstanding crooner, Ray Tainsh. The annual football banquet took place on the last of November, and Mr. Gately, a football scout for Dartmouth, gave us some very interesting particulars about his job. In the early part of December, when MOSAIC elections were held, Wilson Utter was elected Editor-in-Chief.

Strickland Gillilan, a well-known humorist, gave a talk on December 12, which more than fulfilled our fondest expectations. He made us laugh so hard that not a few went out of the Study Hall with a little bit of a tummy-ache. The Proscenium Club presented the annual Christmas Plays, under the direction of Mrs. Thomas, the Friday evening before vacation. Anxious to escape from the trammels of the schoolroom, the student boys departed, to enjoy a well-deserved holiday.

MOSES BROWN

WINTER

Review: January through March

January through March

". . .it was Tuesday, January ninth, and school reopened at eight-thirty a.m."

During our joyous white Christmas vacation—a vacation of letter-carrying, ice skating, skiing, and for most of us just plain work—Moses Brown had quietly waited for us to return. And we returned.

We returned to a Moses Brown that was keyed scholastically for some of the longest Honors and High Honors Lists the school has ever had, and keyed socially for a season when the Tea Dances and the Prom were to be the best yet. We returned to see our winter sportsmen turn in new individual records and have generally successful seasons. We returned also to say good-bye, for a while, to the mid-year graduating Seniors.

On January 27 the Senior Prom, given in honor of those who had sweated out the hot summer, was held in Alumni Hall. Fifty-one couples and "Hank" Arnold were present to dance to the excellent music provided by Ed Drew and his orchestra. On February 2 the twenty Summer School Seniors became Alumni, while the rest of us sang to them for the last time "Long Live the Good School."

"And in this corner. . . " The grapplers turned in a very commendable record. Sharing honors among the matmen were Eaton, Bob Joslin, Captain Paul Cook, Jencks, and Gilmore, the Crusher. Captain Cook wrestled an undefeated season.

The swimming team was handicapped by the loss of Captain Briggs at mid-year. Milt Brier succeeded to Bob's place and proceeded to bring new honors to the team and the school. With his timing down to 1:08 in the century breaststroke, Milt set a new school record and took second in the Nationals at Trenton, New Jersey.

At home we received health cards as notice of mumps that was spreading around. Some caught the affliction; others didn't. Off and on, we were visited by Alumni in the services, many of whom were about to go overseas. And then came the familiar story of "Little Willie," a tradition at school, as Old Man Winter gave us one of the whitest winters in years.

Leaving it to the "Howemen," we learned how! Except that the team was dogged by ill luck that deprived it of its rightful place at the Private School Championships, the team ran a very successful schedule. Similarly, Mr. Hutton's Middlers' Basketball team came close to an undefeated season, winning six out of eight games.

The Glee Club, under the direction of Mr. Mitchell, proved to be one of the school's most popular activities. The Club sang at the Christmas and the spring plays produced by the Proscenium Club. With a nod to the Lincoln School Tormentors, Moses Brown produced Dulcy. Directed by Mrs. Thomas, the play starred Nina Prescott. At Lincoln Mr. Pim Passes By was put on. Both casts, ably supported by production crews, gave excellent performances. Then, what with the baseball players warming up and everyone catching spring fever, it was evident that the winter season was drawing to a close. The Chess Club, after an active term, closed the boards, the Track team began to run outdoors, and the tennis rackets were being restrung.

And so, as we can read in the little "Blue Book," our spring recess began on the twenty-second of March. . .Winter was once more behind us.

April to Commencement

Our spring rest period was soon over, and we drifted back to School for two more terms of education. A complete new schedule of sports and activities greeted us on our return. Tennis rackets, baseball gloves, and javelins abounded; and, if it had not been for classes and homework, life would have been supremely enjoyable. The grounds were covered with reclining boys during recess and the noon hour, and all signs pointed to the fact that Spring was here to stay—Commencement was but a short two months ahead.

On Saturday, April 7, the Seniors straggled down to Brown for a day of College Board Exams, which left most of us in an "Oh, well, I didn't want to go to college anyhow" mood. The next week we omitted three periods while the whole School wrestled with the Cooperative English Tests, which, by comparison, seemed easy. As was made evident by Assistant MOSAIC Photographer McCormick rushing around the campus taking pictures for the last plate, the work on the MOSAIC was being brought to a quick completion. The old Delphian Board put together its final issue and, with a sigh of relief, turned over the work for the last issue of the year to the new staff.

Spring sports forged ahead as usual. The baseball team shaped up very well, starring Captain Mathieu and Bill Weeks from last year's squad and blessed with an abundance of pitching material, including Ed Jarret. Coach Herman built a powerful tennis squad, led by Captain Douglas, Bates, Ingraham, and Small, all lettermen. The track team, although its chances of winning many meets were slight, worked hard, had a good time, and at least acquired an early tan. Everybody trained feverishly for at least two days in preparation for the annual interclass track meet, which the Fourth Form won after a hotly contested struggle. A Junior Track Association was formed, and track for the younger fellows was really organized. With teams including Henry Barnard, East Providence Central, Seekonk, and Moses Brown, a regular schedule was adopted, to be climaxed by a championship meet on May 26 in the Pierce Memorial Stadium at East Providence.

With peace in Europe imminent and the world scene looking infinitely brighter to all of us, the President's sudden and untimely death on April 12 came as a shock and saddened all of us. School was adjourned on April 13, while the whole country went into mourning. Regardless of political faiths, it was very clear to all of us that a great and courageous leader had passed away.

Mr. Mitchell's extensive music program continued, and the Sunday afternoon orchestra, after many Sundays of faithful practice, turned out a full-fledged concert on April 22. The classrooms grew hotter and hotter, more and more ties and collars were undone, and eyes and minds frequently drifted out the windows, away from the subjects at hand. On May 18 the annual Father and Son Day was, as usual, enjoyed by all, with Mr. Howe's track program running off with admirable efficiency.

The days grow longer, and the weather daily becomes less conducive to schoolwork. We settle down, however, and begin to prepare for our finals, and the Prom, Commencement, and summer are just a few short weeks ahead.
